Highlands Ranch, Colorado is a master-planned community south of Denver. The population is increasing and so is the percentage of people who identify as religious “nones.” The Western Church Planting Network (WCPN) is committed to seeing a PCA church planted in Highlands Ranch that will reach this predominately white, well-educated community.

WCPN foresees a healthy and growing, self-sustaining and self-governing PCA church in Highlands Ranch characterized by vibrant Christ-centered worship, effective ministries of evangelism, mercy, and missions coupled with transformational fellowship and discipleship all to the glory of God. The hope is to see this church make disciples who will then help to spread the gospel, multiplying praise to God and planting churches throughout the region.

The Western Church Planting Network’s vision is to plant 20 churches by the year 2025 (twenty churches in ten years). To date we have planted 13 churches and we have 2 new works in process. Each church plant entails shepherding a prospective planter through a church planting residency. This allows the candidate to experience the culture and realities of church planting without the pressure of organizing a church while also allowing time to discern whether this plant is a good match for both parties.
